

Four Generations – One Workplace

Why do generations matter to our work places?

- Shared experiences shape a generation's values and approach to learning & work
- Each generation has strengths that can be connected with others to create synergy
- Generations are an additional facet of diversity
- We are creating the workforce of the future now

“The most successful people in the twenty-first century will be true “Gen Mixers,” people of all ages who bring to work every day their enthusiasm, flexibility, and voracious desire to learn.”

-Bruce Tulgan and Carolyn Martin, *Managing the Generation Mix

For additional information, contact:

Sally Zeiger Hanson, Principal, TrainingConnections, LLC

253-226-2754 / sally@trainingconnections.com

